

HANOVER TROOP'S ANNUAL REUNION

Twenty-One Survivors (Answer to the Roll-Call at Ashland Park.

A SPLENDID DINNER SERVED

Mr. J. F. Howison and Congressman John Lamb Address the Veterans.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ASHLAND, VA., August 14.—Twenty-one veterans of the famous Hanover Troop marched to-day to celebrate in annual reunion at Ashland Park, as they have regularly done for years. The original troop consisted of seventy men and was officered by such well-known men as Wickham, Newton, Timberlake, Winston and Fountain. Most of the original company of cavaliers have gone to their last reward, but their place has been filled by the younger generation. The reunion was a very successful one, and the veterans of the original family. This famous troop was made up of the picked men of old Hanover, and each member furnished his own selected saddle horse. They formed in rendezvous in Ashland on what is now the site of the campus of Randolph-Macon College, and the history of the Civil War relates that this company furnished some of the most courageous and heroic soldiers of the Army of Northern Virginia. It held a most conspicuous position in the first conflict at Bull Run and Manassas, and its losses were quickly filled by men of Hanover equally brave and stalwart as those whose places they had taken.

An unusually large percentage of the survivors turned out to-day, and yet it was the smallest roll in its history. A large number of veterans to-day made up, however, for the otherwise reduced attendance, and the day was particularly suitable for the occasion. The reunion to-day was made up of bunches of jolly old men who have passed three-score, and who chatted with the sons of veterans, and told of many deeds of valor in times. County treasurers and sheriffs and members of court and supervisors, playing like so many school boys. A few of the older survivors wore their old uniforms, but most of the party threw off their coats and collars and made themselves thoroughly comfortable. Each man had that particular thing which gave him most pleasure. Congressman and commander of the day in a way which would have tickled old Andrew Jackson almost to death.

A fine dinner was served in the dining pavilion at the park, which was made up of all the good things that the country has to offer. Barbecued mutton, real Brunswick stew, and fried chicken galore. Everything ate to a finish, and in good old Confederate style. Messrs. Chastine Wingfield and Julius Holman, of Richmond, acted as masters of ceremonies in the dining pavilion, and were assisted by such well-known purveyors of food and cooking as W. C. Parlinson, C. Park England, and old David Anderson (colored). The latter, by the way, is sixty-two years old, and has been a member of the troop since the "white flag" in that same typical Southern slave style and fidelity as he has always done, not excepting his four years of service as hostler for "Marse Day," who is now one of the oldest survivors of the troop.

After dinner the party assembled in the main pavilion. Mr. J. Churchill Cooke, the president of the association, introduced Mr. J. F. Howison as the first speaker, who was followed by Captain John Lamb, member of Congress from this district. Captain Lamb was in good voice, and, as usual, delighted the old soldiers with his remarks, being frequently interrupted in a jovial manner by his comrades. The speaker was fresh from his experience of public relations at the recent celebration at "Brannan's Station," and told several new war stories, which were applauded. He praised the work of the cavalry, and particularly that of the Fourth Virginia, and said that on the 6th of July, 1862, more men were killed by the sabre than in all the subsequent engagements of the Civil War put together; that after that time both sides fought in the extreme fear of death by cold steel. He alluded especially to the significant fight at Hall's Shop, in this county. He regretted seriously the fact that the people have lost their art of horsemanship riding in the present day.

Among those of the troop who were present to-day were the following: Hon. John Lamb, J. C. Cooke, Thomas S. Taylor, J. J. Terry, A. Brown, H. S. Anderson, O. G. Brown, A. W. Brock, W. P. Blunt, B. M. Baker, W. E. Carter, George W. Coby, Charles H. Day, John Green, Thomas B. Gilman, J. E. Leadbetter, J. W. Nuckolls, J. T. Stanley, F. E. Wright, Peter Wingfield.
